HAWAII ISLAND EXTENDED FURLOUGH INMATE FAILS TO CHECK IN AT HALE NANI REINTEGRATION CENTER

HONOLULU – Extended furlough inmate Jason Cantan failed to report for his scheduled check-in this evening (Wednesday) at the Hale Nani Reintegration Center. State Sheriffs and Hawaii County Police were notified.

Inmates in the extended furlough program live and work outside of the facility but must check in at various times each week.

Cantan was serving time for Identity Theft 2 and Promoting Prison Contraband. His next parole hearing is scheduled for April of this year.

Cantan 37 years old. He is 6'2" and weighs 230 lbs. He has brown hair and brown eyes.

If seen, call Hawaii County Police Department's non-emergency line at 935-3311.

Hale Nani is located in the Panaewa. The center offers offenders reintegration services and a work release program for sentenced inmates who will be released on the island of Hawaii.
