STAR LIGHT STAR BRIGHT CHRISTMAS PROGRAM REUNITES INCARCERATED WOMEN WITH THEIR CHILDREN

HONOLULU – Roman Catholic Diocese of Honolulu’s Prison Ministry hosted a special Christmas gathering at the Women’s Community Correctional Center (WCCC) Saturday.

For the past 17 years, the Diocese Prison Ministry has been working with the Department of Public Safety to help incarcerated moms connect with their children. This year, 64 children, 30 caregivers, and 30 female inmates participated in the Star Light, Star Bright Christmas event at the facility. Donations also helped provide gifts for all of the children in the program.

“This program is something the women look forward to as much as the children,” said WCCC Warden Eric Tanaka. “We do several Kids Day Events throughout the year but this special day is the most anticipated one for the moms as well as the kids. We are happy to see women reuniting and rekindling strong familial bonds with their children during this festive event”.

The Star Light, Star Bright program has grown from home delivery of gifts to the children to a family gathering at the prison. Aside from lasting memories, there was a visit from Santa Claus, games, holiday season activities and even a parting gift baskets for the caregivers filled with toiletries and other household needs.

The Star Light Star Bright party made its first debut at the WCCC in 2010. 2012 was the first year that neighbor island children and their caregivers were flown to Oahu to attend the Christmas party.

The Star Light, Star Bright program relies on donations. That money helps the diocese fly families from the neighbor islands to Oahu, and cover meals and lodging at St. Stephen Diocesan Center. Star Light, Star Bright also provides Christmas gifts and “care baskets” with non-perishable food and household items for families unable to make it to the Christmas party.
